We have always avoided extremes in style. Avoided them because they're always in bad taste and such clothes are the most expensive.

Furthermore, an extreme style remains in for but a limited time: after that, no matter how good the material and the workmanship, it shouts to the world, "Out of date."

Your last year's Mc-Dougall-Cassou suit may not be what you want to wear as "best" this year; but, as "second best," you wear it feeling neither shabby nor conspicuous.

Butter Nut Bread Everybody's Food

Bread is the food we find on every table-rich and poor alike. Pity the man who eats little bread. He tickles his palate at the expense of stamina and muscular strength. His resistance to disease is weakened by the rich foods he eats. We sometimes hear the expression, "The sick rich man cannot get well." He pays the price of rich foods and too little bread.

The most elaborate meal or the simplest, includes bread. What's so appetizing for the dainty luncheon as those wedges of sandwiches? What else can take the place of bread in the dinner pail? What for breakfast can equal the zest of well-crisped toast?

Ford has dropped from ethereal to solid lines; the ardour, enthusiasm, dreamy castles, bold and daring valour, with crowning halos and jingling breast medals, have been vaporized, and here I am surrounded by the progeny of two generations with the multiplication table still working . Blessed?-Well sir I leave this solution to your judgment and the Lord's decree: "He docth all things for the best," and I'm doing my best. I had scarce settled myself for quiet repose, having returned from the Eiks matinee where chorus girls' legs and warbling of sweet notes that shame a feathered songster, resounded in my ear, and dazzled mine eye, when Cynthia, the eldest, grew musical, plunked her verbose form before the "Pianny," and after planting forty thumps to warm its nested chords, dropped her head backward, her mouth forward, and her eyes upward, while the words of that familiar ditty rolled in agonizing strains (I mean ascended) until they reached the high water mark, when an explosion, or, as I thought, the tube busted and steam exhausted:-A Father should never smile, much less laugh, at the failures or weaknesses of his children, (I never shall again:) but her fingers moving, throat gurgling, eyes rolling, with only spasmodic notes emanating, was too much for my sense of ridicule and my resonant haw! haw! haw! raised her from her musical reveille:-Boo! Hoo! Hoo! she roared, and spontaneously from every door gathered the relatives, shricking like mad, simply to bear her company, without any knowledge or inkling of the disturbing reason. I protested, orated, rotated, and expostulated, declaring innocent intent, but to no avail, the blubbering, bellowing, bellicose bifurcated youl voluminously increasing while pearly tearlets, streaming noselets, and liquid spitlets, dampened both walls, floor, and garments. "Pansy" was the youngest, and showing signs of fatigue, I gathered her to mine arms where she rallied Instanter demanding "ice tream munny," to induce quietude. This was forthcoming: "Tootsy," taking the cue followed in line: - Her draft was heavier: "Topsy" came next, and being of her father's mould, played her cards for a safe win-I was becoming disconcerted, impoverished, and vicious, as Ole Granny, following in line, dumped herself into my lap, and began gumming, crooning, and slobbering o'er my already disheveled whiskers. "For God's sake granny," I yelled, "how much?" This raised her daughter's, (my wife's,) ire, she being the last in line, and with an imprecation which articulated close to the profane, she seized my forelock, twisted my nose, augered my ear, and for lack of further head holds, began thumping:-The opportune was seized by every brat from Susanne down, all joining in the melee;-I detail no further, but having recovered I now am en route for home with this written instrument for signature in hand:-It reads: "We solemnly promise and agree, each with the other, that under no circumstances
